Recommended foods in Japan

Cited from Wikipedia

Unagi/Japanese food Cruisin

I used to cook kabayaki and eel bowls mainly with Japanese eels in Japan, and I've been eating this food culture for a long time.

In Japan, it first appeared as "Munagi" in "Manyoshu" in the Nara period, and this is the old name for Unagi/eels. In the Manyoshu (Amagasakimoto) digitally released by Kyoto University, the kana is written next to the Manyogana, and the kana of "Munagi" is assigned to the "Takena" section.

Usangi/Eel

Eel is high in protein, high in vitamin A, vitamin B1, vitamin B2, vitamin D, vitamin E, DHA, EPA, and minerals (iron, zinc, calcium, copper) and is easy to digest. In Japan, even from the remains of the Jomon period. Edible eel bones have been excavated.

Unagi is served as part of unadon (sometimes spelled unagidon, especially in menus in Japanese restaurants in Western countries), a donburi dish with sliced eel served on a bed of rice. A kind of sweet biscuit called unagi pie made with powdered unagi also exists.

How did you come about working for this company?

In his last company, he used to work as a project manager of home appliances maker in Osaka. His job requires a lot of travelling and one day he thought to himself about re-employment, to get away from the busy city life to relax in the countryside. In addition, he wanted to take this opportunity to make use of his experience and skills from the maker industry to challenge himself in the new environment. However, still face the same situation now with lots of travelling around the world, but he is relaxing in home with his family and enjoy the quiet beauty of nature in Nagano, where our company is at.

What do you want to do in the future? He wants to sell a lot of new things! His desire is derived from personality, being strong, active and full of energy. This gives him motivation in both business and private life. For example, He already have backpacker experience when he is still in high school. That's amazing, isn't it?

At last, please something to say to valued customers. Want to meet you and talk/share experience about everything, like we did before!!
